

Russia on the world market of rough and cut diamonds

Relevance

The diamond industry brings the most stable income to the Russian economy: in the form of taxes and other payments received from the sale of rough diamonds to domestic and foreign markets.

Aim

The aim is to reveal opportunities and trends in Russia on the world market of rough and cut diamonds.

Conclusion

- Russia today has a great advantage as compared to other countries.
- The economic crisis has once again shown the need for development of the domestic cutting industry.
- Russia's accession to the WTO is a key element of Russia's integration into the international economy, and this problem is one of the most difficult problems nowadays.